What Price Wine?

In the Middle Ages wine was used as currency. However, you wouldn't find the most expensive wine in the Middle Ages. The most expensive regular sized bottle ever sold was - sold at Christie's London in 1985 for $160,000. This wine bottle was purchased for a private collection and prominently features the initials of Thomas Jefferson etched into the glass. This practice was not unusual in the 18th century when large purchases were made directly from the Chateau. The authenticity of this bottle is now under question.

Chateau Lafitte 1787
